

Robots come in all shapes and sizes, from tiny microbots that can fit on the head of a pin to massive industrial machines that can build skyscrapers. By learning about the different types of robots and their functions, children can start to imagine the possibilities of what these machines can do and may even start to design their own robots in their imaginations.