

New Zealand is a nation of nature, with native forests, national parks and a network of rivers. Nicknamed Aotearoa, meaning 'land of the long white cloud', New Zealand is home to many native animals like kiwis, kakapos and tuataras. New Zealand's north and south islands offer different natural wonders, from the stunning beaches of Northland to the snowy peaks of the Southern Alps.