

Rockets have to travel very fast

(around 28,000 kilometers per hour!)

to stay in orbit around the Earth.

This is called orbital velocity, and it's what keeps satellites in space.