Cooking and baking can also teach you important life skills, like planning, organisation, and following directions. These skills can help you in all areas of life, from school to work to personal projects. By learning about cooking and baking, you can develop important skills that will help you succeed.